Dear Harold:

You have been overwhelming me. I have hardly had time to read your letters through.

I received the three articles but have not been able to send them out because you have put no titles on them and they have to have titles. I am much much too busy to think some up myself; besides I am not a writer. I think too that you ought to be absolutely sure they are right before you send them to me.

Also remember that you are writing for magazines which in many cases do not publish for three to six months; it's not like writing for newspapers or weeklies.

As soon as you send me the titles, I will get the articles out.

I took the Cornish Hens away with me for a weekend and used your fruit recipe, which was just marvelous.

Sincerely,

Toni
